The Kreuzbergalm is one of the most beautiful places to stop for refreshments between Lake Tegernsee and Lake Schliersee. This varied circular hike combines Neureuth, Gindelalmschneid and Kreuzbergalm, featuring scenic ridge trails, peaceful mountain forests and impressive panoramic views.

Safety information

- The route mainly follows well-marked hiking trails, forest roads and alpine paths. Some sections can become slippery in wet conditions or after rain.
- With a hiking time of up to five hours, the tour requires a good level of fitness and realistic time planning.
- During the summer months, you may encounter grazing livestock on the alpine meadows. Please keep a safe distance from the animals, close all pasture gates and stay on the designated trails.
- Check the current weather conditions before setting out and make sure to carry enough drinking water for the longer route.

Equipment

- Ankle-high hiking boots with a good-grip sole
- Weather-appropriate layered clothing
- Rain jacket – mountain weather can change quickly
- Sufficient drinking water and a small snack
- Sun protection (sunscreen, sunglasses and a hat)
- Hiking poles – particularly useful on the longer descents
- A fully charged mobile phone for emergencies
- Cash for the alpine huts

Roadbook

The hike begins directly at DAS TEGERNSEE and initially leads towards Neureuth. For the ascent, we recommend the varied forest trail above Lake Tegernsee. The path winds its way uphill through the shady mountain forest in numerous switchbacks, repeatedly revealing beautiful views of the lake. After around one and a half hours, you will reach Berggasthof Neureuth. With its traditional character and sunny terrace, the mountain inn is an inviting place for a first break and offers magnificent views across the entire Tegernsee Valley.

From Neureuth, the trail continues along the scenic ridge path towards Gindelalmschneid. If you wish, you can take a short detour to the three huts of Gindelalm before ascending to the summit. Picturesquely situated among the alpine meadows, they are perfect for a short break and a traditional refreshment stop. Afterwards, return to the main trail and continue uphill towards Gindelalmschneid.

The route then follows a descending alpine pasture trail towards Kreuzbergalm. Along the way, new views of the surrounding mountains and towards Lake Schliersee open up time and again. Idyllically situated on a hill, Kreuzbergalm impresses with its traditional atmosphere and regional specialities. After a relaxing break, the return journey begins.

From the alpine hut, the route follows the Alpbach stream downhill through the valley. The forest road descends gently through shady woodland and alongside small mountain streams. Once you reach the outskirts of Tegernsee, the final section leads you comfortably back to DAS TEGERNSEE.
